Few Folks Have Gray Hair Now

Well known local druggists say everybody is using old-time recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and luster, or when it fades turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and luster and gives it an appearance of abundance.

BLACK AND WHITE EFFECTS ARE AMONG THE SEASON'S MOST SUCCESSFUL HATS.

BY LILLIAN E. YOUNG.

As compared to the stiff, adamant sailor shapes and prim touches of bygone days which in their unyielding rigidity suggested genuine relics of the stone age, our so-called sailors and tailormen of today appear to have annexed the titles unbecomingly and tailor-made of to resemble the style termed "strictly tailored."

The term is paradoxical as applied to such a hat as the sketch illustrates, and yet it is considered a tailor-made for some obscure reason. In fact, the term apparently includes all hats that are not large and floppy-brimmed and flower-laden on the one hand, and the other is of white lisse straw and has a very narrow brim faced with black velvet. The transparent extension is of white chiffon. Caught closely against the crown are large black velvet polka-dots with blue centers, and these are arranged to space out the crown as advantageously and artistically as possible.

Leighorns and Neapolitan halfbraids have been duly revived, and as a general thing, are made up into the larger, more dressy models.

Flowers of all descriptions, more wonderfully natural than ever, and gro-grain ribbons in all shades and widths constitute the popular trimmings for the season.

TODAY'S HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS.

BY MARY LEE.

Uses for Cold Coffee.

Coffee left over from breakfast or dinner, if saved each day and kept in a bottle, can be used in various ways.

Coffee jelly is time-honored as a means of utilizing cold coffee, but there are many other and less common recipes that it would pay the thrifty housekeeper to list. Here, for example, is one for a coffee cordial that is a novel and inexpensive liqueur to serve after dinner: Seven lumps of sugar, half a large cup of coffee, half a cup of Santa Cruz rum. Heat the coffee, mix the rum and sugar with it and let it stand until cold.

A delicious, if uncommon, dessert is coffee couffle. One and a half cups of coffee, half a cup of milk, one tablespoon of gelatin, two-thirds of a cup of sugar, three eggs, one-eighth of a cup of sweetened coffee, well shaken together, half a large cup of coffee, half a cup of Santa Cruz rum. Heat the coffee, mix the rum and sugar with it and let it stand until cold.

PLAIN NEEDLEWORK.

BY HELEN HOWE.

Seams and Hems.

While it is not customary for girls in this country to fill a dower chest, as in certain European countries, the parents of the bride here always provide the outfit of household linens. A mother who has been accustomed to mothering her own plain needlework will like, no doubt, to include some of her handiwork in the list of articles furnished.

For instance, tablecloths must be hemmed. The seams will look much better if set in by hand, while a top-stitched hem, used instead of the ordinary hemming, will be much stronger and never rip. To make the top stitching the hem is set in the usual way, and then is turned back and down, making a firm seam. After the sewing is done, the cloth is laid flat and the seam pressed flat with the finger covered with a thimble.

Most women know that a thread must be drawn through a tablecloth as a line of stitching, but many do not know that when buying tablecloths by the yard the goods should be cut single, not double, as salesmen usually cut it.

If opened, the cloth can be cut straighter, and there will be less waste at the ends when it is being cut for hemming.

Napkins and sheets can be hemmed on the machine, if these be bought by the yard.

If pillowcase tubing is purchased instead of the slips, ready to use, it should be cut in generous lengths for the pillows and finished with deep hems—say three inches wide. Rubbing tapes longer than the pillowslip closed at one end, because the wear is more equally divided.

If a strip of tape be sewn down the hem at each corner of a sheet, and taken along the hem for three inches or so, it will prevent the hem tearing out when the sheet hangs upon the line in a strong wind.

Tablecloths which wear better than does fringe, but some of the better towels could be made at home and buttonholed at the ends in shallow scallops.

Sheets are marked in the middle of the upper edge about four inches from the hem. Pillow slips and bedspread towels are lettered at about the same place.

Table and sideboard cloths are marked so that the letters can be seen at one corner resting upon the table and about three inches from the edge. Kitchen towels display a single letter at one corner.

SPRING MEATS.

The spring appetite demands a certain crispness and savoriness of the food it enjoys, and meats as much as anything else must be prepared with this fact in remembrance. Here are some recipes for meat dishes that give the desired pliancy to the spring menu.

Beefsteak should always be broiled—especially in warm weather. It is more digestible and more tempting. The steak should be at least an inch thick. Trim it and wipe it clean with cold water. Rub the broiler with fat and place the steak so that the thickest part is in the center of the broiler. Sear the steak quickly on one side, turn in half a minute and sear on the other side. Turn every half minute. Allow four or five minutes for a steak an inch thick. Sprinkle the steak with salt and pepper before turning the last time. Slip it on a hot platter and add a little melted butter. A delicate onion flavor is obtained by rubbing the platter with onion before slipping the steak on it.

Calf's liver can be delicately prepared with cream gravy. Soak the liver for half an hour and then dry it thoroughly, slice it in slices a third of an inch thick, and drop for a moment in boiling water. Then either strip off the skin or else cut it several times to keep the slices from curling. Dry and drop the slices into deep hot fat and brown. Then put in a saucepan with cream enough to cover, thicken with a little butter and flour rolled together, season well with salt and pepper and serve.

Jellied chicken positively revives the appetite on a listless spring day. To make it, simmer a chicken until the meat slips from the bones. Reduce the water in which the chicken boils to about a pint. In the meantime remove all skin, fat and gristle from the chicken and cut into small pieces, or else leave in the big pieces that naturally come from the bones. Let the liquid cool sufficiently so that all fat can be removed. Then season the liquid well with salt and paprika, heat, add half an ounce of gelatin, and pour over the chicken, in a wet mold. When you turn the chicken from the mold, garnish with the stuffed olives, parsley and slices of lemon.

Meat soufflé is a good left-over meat dish for warm weather. To make it, prepare a cupful of good white sauce, well seasoned, and to this add a cupful of chopped meat of any sort. When it is hot add the yolks of two eggs, cook for a minute, and cool. Beat the whites stiff and add to the cool mixture, pour into a buttered baking dish, and bake until firm. Serve immediately.

Leghorns for Summer.

Leghorn straw hats are a pleasant revival. Nothing could be lovelier for the warm weather hat with thin frocks than a leghorn at its best. And this summer's hats in leghorn are at their best. They are soft, with undulating crowns, and they are trimmed with velvet, flowers and chiffon in a charming way. Lewis manipulates flat leghorn plaques into smart little tricornes that set with special brilliancy above some of the new frocks.

WHITE SERGE TRIMMED WITH BRAID.

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE.

Special Correspondence of The Star.

NEW YORK, April 27.—It is not entirely settled that white serge will be a fashionable fabric. The fact that France did not send over a suit or a frock of it is without weight, because America usually devises its own white linen and serge suits.

Neither of these is a favorite in France. The women over there use them sparingly for the Riviera, but they drop them when it comes time to go to Deauville and into the Rhine valley. But America likes both serge and linen for summer, although there are large tracts of populated land where serge is entirely too warm for service after the 15th of April.

One-piece frocks of serge are admirable in certain environments; they are good when women live in the country where fashionable sports are going on and where the weather is sufficiently cool to allow the use of woolen fabric.

Yet none of these restrictions is weighted by the woman who greets the first balmy weather with a white serge gown. It is a trader in costume—therefore she chooses it as the kind of suit that will tide her over many difficulties between May and October.

A Debatable Question.

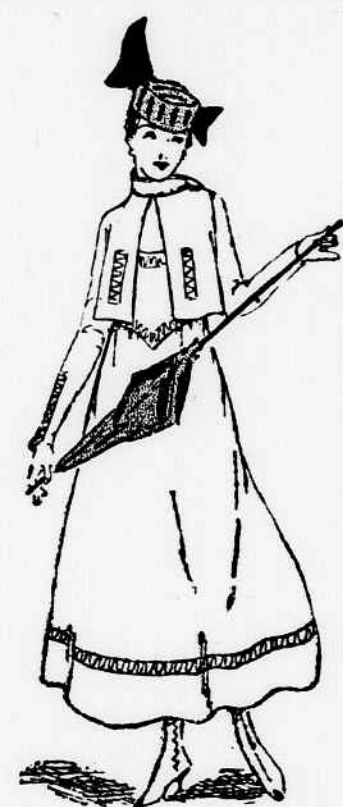

It may, and again it may not. It is a debatable question—this serviceability of white serge in warm weather.

One would like to advise every woman to look into her needs, and the relation of clothes to them, before she purchases anything for the warm weather season. Every one has had the experience of buying clothes in May that were impossible to wear in June.

If, however, one feels that a white serge suit can return to the wearer full value for the money paid out, then it is well to remember that an ornate design of sou-tache braid is the first aid to both linen and serge this season. It lifts them out of the commonplace.

The sketch shows a really smart white serge suit that was worn in the open where fashionable women are foregathered at a country club for the commencement of the fashionable spring season. The wide skirt was exceedingly short, and its deep hem was outlined with a strip of braiding framed in by two straight lines.

The jacket was unusual in that it hung straight from the shoulders over a waistcoat that was cut to a point below the waist line and around the chest where there were two pistol pockets, also outlined with braid. These oblong pockets, which are used for ornament and not service, have gained a wide popularity this season.

Coat Is Sufficient.

This coat is one of the kind that need not carry a blouse beneath it; it is sufficient unto itself. It is easy to add a flat muslin yoke to the top of the waistcoat and, therefore, avoid the necessity of a blouse.

The scarf which is about the neck, and which is attached to this serge jacket, is a novel bit of neckwear. It first came out on an "organdie blouse" and was infrequently copied during the winter. It is, in reality, a floating collar that lies loosely in front and dropping into two long ends at the back.

By the way, if one does not care to put white soutache on white serge, it is a good touch to use colored braid.

IN THE KITCHEN AND PANTRY

Rhubarb Sauce.

Rhubarb stewed with sugar to a thick marmalade makes an excellent sauce to serve with pork instead of apple.

Rhubarb Fritters.

Prepare a bunch of rhubarb for cooking, cutting each stalk in two or three pieces—the longer the better. Have ready a pan of boiling fat and some batter mixture. Dip the pieces of rhubarb first in the batter, and then drop them into the boiling fat; cook for five minutes. Take out carefully, pile one on top of another, sprinkle liberally with castor sugar and serve very hot.

Rhubarb Fool.

Boil ten ounces sugar in one quart of water until it forms a syrup; then put in about two pounds of rhubarb (cut up in about two pounds of rhubarb) and cook until tender. When cooked, rub through a fine sieve, and then mix with half a pint of cream or custard.

Carrots and Celery.

Parse the root and green leaves from a head of celery and cut into one-inch lengths. Wash the celery, and put it in the steamer in a small saucepan. Barely cover it with water, and let it cook slowly until the water has almost evaporated. Then, having prepared the carrots and the sauce as for the carrot fritzsche, add to it a well beaten egg, stirring vigorously, season with salt and pepper, and serve with the carrots. Stir gently to mix thoroughly and send to the table in a hot vegetable dish.
